The Honorable Ed Schafer
Secretary of Agriculture
United States Department of Agriculture
1400 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20520

Dear Secretary Schafer:

We strongly urge you to immediately approve the Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) proposed rule that would provide to the public lists of retail consignees of meat and poultry products that have been voluntarily recalled by federally inspected meat or poultry plants. This rule has been reviewed by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) once before and is currently under final review at USDA. We urge you to approve the proposed rule and forward it to OMB in a timely manner. This is an important consumer protection measure that should be implemented as soon as possible.

The announcement by USDA last week of the largest meat recall in U.S. history – 143 million pounds of beef products – highlights the importance of providing consumers with sufficient information during a recall so that they can take the necessary precautions to protect themselves and their families. Last week's announcement comes on the heels of more than 20 beef recalls in the last year. Consumers are understandably concerned about the safety of the food supply and are particularly anxious for information when a recall is announced.

When a recall is announced, consumers need sufficient information so they can determine if products they have purchased are part of the recall. In the case of the Westland Meat recall, information provided to consumers has been incomplete and confusing. If this rule had been in effect, consumers would have been provided additional information to help them determine if they had purchased the recalled meat and where they could return it.

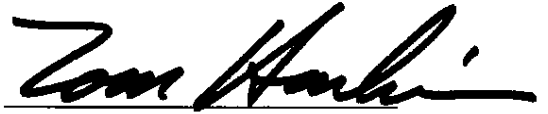

Unfortunately, a series of memoranda of understanding between the Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) and State and Federal agencies currently denies consumers the right to know where recalled meat products have been sold. This is unacceptable and only serves to keep useful information from consumers when recalls are announced.

We strongly support the FSIS proposed rule and urge you to immediately approve the proposal and forward it to OMB for final clearance. Implementing this rule will enhance the current recall process by giving FSIS another tool to help ensure safe and effective recalls of contaminated products. This is an important consumer protection measure that should be implemented in a timely manner.

Sincerely,
